PUBLIC ROADS

Strong Argument For the State to Aid in Building Them—A Chance to Do Something For Kentucky.

WRITTEN BY HARRY SOMMERS

The following article concerning the public roads of Kentucky was written by Harry A. Sommers, editor of the Elizabethtown News, and appeared in the Louisville Times:

If the Kentucky Legislature, which met in Frankfort, January 7, wants to immortalize itself for the state and render lasting service of inestimable value to the people of the old Commonwealth, it will pass a bill whereby the state can materially and substantially aid in the building of turnpike roads.

There never was a more auspicious time to inaugurate this important forward step in the development of Kentucky.

The state is out of debt. The new capital is about completed. There is a surplus in the treasury. The tax rate is yielding more revenue than is needed.

Peccol Conditions of Kentucky.

Kentucky, like all Gaul, is divided in three parts: the bluegrass, the mountains and western Kentucky. The central portion of the state, known as the bluegrass, pays more to the state treasury than it draws out, while the other two sections draw out more than they pay in. To meet the very great difference in the wealth of the various sections of the Commonwealth our laws have been so framed that the wealthier sections shall help the poorer. For this reason the expense of all courts, maintenance of pauper idiots and many other things which in other states of more equitable distribution of wealth are borne by the several counties, in Kentucky are paid by the State itself. It is upon this principle, which our public school system is maintained, the richest counties paying into the state treasury in school taxes more than they draw out for that purpose, while the poorer counties draw out for the same purpose as much as two and three times the amount they pay in. It is upon this principle of the richer helping the poorer, that aid is asked for state turnpike roads. The great city of Louisville, the wealthy bluegrass region and the railroads of the state can well afford to aid by paying a state tax, to build turnpikes in the less fortunate sections of the state, that are unable to have them without such aid.

It is a noticeable fact that the press of Louisville, the Commercial Club, and the Board of Trade have always been in favor of building good roads, and from that quarter we are satisfied that there will be hearty support in any measure of state aid for that purpose. A similar sentiment is certain to prevail in the bluegrass, where they have good turnpikes and the people know the worth of them. The railroads have never opposed a road tax. On the other hand, realizing how good roads contribute to advancement and development, they have shown a spirit to help every good road movement and have frequently hauled road material at cost or less than cost.

All but about thirty-seven out of the 119 counties of the state are pauper counties; that is, they draw out of the State Treasury more than they pay in. It is a remarkable fact that practically every county that pays more into the state treasury than it draws out has a system of good turnpike roads, that of the eighty-three pauper counties not a single one of them has a good system of turnpike roads, it is not merely a coincidence, it is a logical sequence. Pauper counties are largely so because they do not have turnpikes. Surplus-paying counties are largely so because they do have turnpikes.

There are a number of counties in Southern and Western Kentucky that are in the pauper list where the soil is as good and the production per acre as much in the bluegrass, and if they had turnpikes they would soon be out of the pauper list.

Roads Primarily For Farmers.

Roads are the principal arteries of trade for the farmer. They carry his produce to market. They give him access to the town where he trades; put him in touch with the railroad and the county seat, the church and the school. Good roads cost the farmers of Kentucky more than their taxes amount to; more than the tobacco bill or the drink bill of the entire state. Good roads made of local materials and pay a bigger dividend on the investment than bank stocks or even standard oil company stock.

Kentucky is an agricultural state. All of its reputation is due to what it produces. It is famed for its horses, its mules and its cattle; it produces 95 per cent. of the hemp of the United States, half of the tobacco and grows large quantities of corn, wheat and hay. The farmers pay nearly, if not quite, half of the taxes of the entire state. The assessment of land alone is over $300,000,000. If as stated Kentucky owes its reputation to what the soil produces and its wealth principally to the soil, it is not a matter of tardy justice that the state should come to the rescue of the farmer by aiding him in building good roads, when such aid will wonderfully enrich the wealth and prosperity of the entire state? The farmers should demand this of their Representatives in the Legislature, as a matter of justice and right, and if they will demand it they will be sure to get it.

Material For Road Building.

No state in the union is so abundantly provided with excellent and accessible road material. On every hand our hills are full of limestone rock which makes ideal turnpikes, and in our valleys our water courses contain great banks of gravel. In the hills the Lord had stowed up in our hills the inexhaustible supply of rock and the vast beds of gravel in our valleys that Kentucky should have the greatest public highways in the world. In addition to these we have practically limitless amount of rock asphalt which makes the ideal highway.

State Aid Without Additional Taxation.

I now come to the milk in the coconut. The gist of the whole matter: It would be money well expended if an additional tax was levied in the state for the purpose of giving state aid for turnpikes. (Kentucky is just now in such a condition that there can be very substantial aid given without levying a single dollar of additional tax and without putting an additional burden upon anyone.) If this statement is correct, it is prepared to prove it, could any intelligent members of the Legislature oppose it? Our present tax rate in Kentucky is fifty-two and a half cents on the dollar. Judge Hager, who is the Auditor of the state, and who is more familiar with its finances than any other man, said in his campaign for Governor, that if he be elected he would recommend a reduction of the tax rate ten cents on the hundred dollars, and that it could be done without any impairment of the present efficient conduct of the state's business. I recommend that instead of reducing the tax rate ten cents on the hundred dollars that such an amount be set aside for state aid in building turnpike roads in the various counties in the Commonwealth. This may look like an insignificant sum on its face, but an examination of the Audi-

"WET WOODS"

Dense Forest, Where It Was Once Believed No Lost Traveler Ever Returned—The Ash Pond and Lost Island.

NEAR THE BARDSTOWN ROAD.

There is a narrow strip of land lying between the L. & N. railroad and the Bardstown turnpike called the "Wet Woods." It is five or six miles long, and does not extend to point more than a mile and a half in width. This section of the country has been heralded by all the Louisville newspapers for its mud roads and scenes of iniquity. Many misdeeds, felonies and murders, which have been enacted in the suburbs of Louisville and parts of the county far removed from the Wet Woods, have been called "Wet Woods" troubles. Under this it obtained a most undesirable character.

It includes the Ash Pond and once famous Lost Island. It was once believed that no lone traveler ever made his exit from its dense forest of ash, oak, gum and entangled shrubs overhanging with grape and hyacinth vines, unless he was accompanied by St. Baker. Sko knew every tree that had a knot on it, every tree that contained a colony of bees, or a den of coons, the footprints or the paths of the bear, lion or wild turkey. These, together with the many wild boars of the jungles, Sko considered he had a pre-emptive right to claim.

This land, about twenty years ago, was bestrided with huts, many of them made of rails covered with bark and occupied by migratory men, women and children whose principal occupation was to cut and clean the land. As soon as their homes were brought to daylight they moved away to other wild places. Like the dog, buffalo and bear, they would not stand the advance of civilization.

How different since then and now. Since the land has been cleared, huts and huts, it has become as productive of corn and hay as the best Ohio river farms. The greatest difficulty with these "quatters" was to find a piece of ground high enough to build a house on, for the water before the land was cleared and drained stood from one to three feet deeper than half the year, but still they did build, live, move, multiply and all that without missionary aid. What they needed was a doctor and a most charitable one.

NEW BURG.

Jan. 6.—Miss Nell Gallagher, entertained in honor of her visitor, Miss Edna Zeigler, of Fairmount. Those present were Misses Call Hart, Leslie and Fannie Coons, Dora Leander, Lillie Mae Applegate and Labele Frederick, Messrs. Emmett Mills, John Lannert, Robert Cook, Tom Ball, Charlie Hindle, George and Charlie Gallagher, Alfred and Walter Frederick, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shively, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edinger, of Louisville, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Zeigler. After a very enjoyable afternoon they attended church at Meadow Home.

Miss Call Hart entertained in honor of Miss Nell Gallagher's visitor, Miss Edna Zeigler. Miss Verna Mill spent Saturday and Sunday with her sister, Mrs. H. H. Frederick. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shively entertained several of their Louisville friends this week. Miss Lilly Mack Applegate entertained at a six o'clock dinner Friday.

tor's report and the report of the Railroad Commission as to the amount of property upon which taxes are paid show, the total assessed valuation of all property in the state is $770,000,000. A ten cent tax rate on this yields a handsome sum of $77,000,000. A very handsome amount, indeed, to contribute to roads without putting burdens upon anybody. I believe that the state should contribute $500 per mile for every mile of turnpike built in the state under required specifications. This would build 1,500 miles of turnpike per annum, and in ten years would build over 15,000 miles of such roads practically converting every important highway in the entire state into a first-class macadam road. In conclusion let me say that nothing could be done in Kentucky that would help the state as much, and no more auspicious time could be selected than the present to begin it.

HOW TO MAKE A FARM PAY.

This is a subject that has occupied the minds of thousands of people the world over. The laborer has the best of the situation on our farms today, and the land owners are racking their brains trying to devise some plan—irrespective of the class of labor, with which they have to deal. Most all of the good men of our country today have gone into our large cities, where they get from $1.50 to $2.00 per day at most any kind of work. So the question then, "how to make the farm pay?" is an all-important one—not only to the large planter, but more especially to the small land owner and planter. It is more especially to the latter class that I hope to be of profit by the following thoughts:

I would first suggest that no man should attempt to farm, no matter how large or small his farm may be, unless he is willing to take hold himself and save his own hands as well as his brain—take the lead. There are but mighty few of our hands today that understand what you mean when you say "go" do so and so. You must say, "come" that is what they want you to say. It is impossible to expect success otherwise. Personal attention is as necessary for successful farming as it is for successful banking or any other business.

As a rule the educated class of the city is apt to look on the tillers of the soil as a slow, ignorant, unlettered class of people. The only true way for a man to be a farmer is to devote his entire time to the farm and its equipment. Those who are willing to put all their time and thoughts to agriculture can make the farm pay, and it is important that special care and attention be given to all livestock by providing food and shelter for them, as they occupy one of the most important factors of the farm to make it pay. It has been said that the manure from one horse, properly handled for one year, is about $27 per year and from a cow about $22, and from a pig about $10 per year. So you see my friends there is money to be made yet on the farm if you will use good common sense, exercise good common judgment and take hold of the wheel yourself.

TRUSTEES

Serve in At Highland Park—New Board Elects Officers For the Next Two Years.

Highland Park, Jan. 7.—The old Board of Trustees of the Township of Highland Park held its last meeting last evening, after which the new board of Trustees, consisting of five members of the Citizens' Ticket, which was elected by an overwhelming majority at the November election, was sworn in. The members of the new board are J. T. Wiley, C. W. Cooper, T. H. Montgomery, Louis, Erwin and C. G. Wright.

The new board immediately went into executive session and elected officials for the term of two years. J. T. Wiley was elected chairman of the board. The other officials elected were as follows:

A. L. Daniels, clerk; Dr. C. M. Edmunds, treasurer; W. T. McNally, town attorney; George W. Wilson, town marshal.

Following the meeting, the members of the new board were tendered a banquet at the home of C. W. Cooper, at which more than half a hundred of the prominent citizens of the town and their wives were in attendance. The banquet was the fulfillment of a promise made in a joking way during the last political campaign.

Mr. C. W. Cooper, the host, presided at the toastmaster. Among the prominent guests in attendance were Judge and Mrs. E. A. Davis, J. F. Coady, Mr. and Mrs. William Parsons, G. E. Cunningham, Dr. J. L. Lutz, Dr. C. Sessa, Rev. and Mrs. George Davidson, Prof. and Mrs. W. L. Napier, H. C. Coats.

POTATO DOLL.

Get a potato and run a string through it from one end to the other. At the other end of the string, tie a knot for a head. Hang the potato in a sunny window and ere long a number of sprouts will start all over it. Leave on two for arms and two for feet, pinching off all the rest. When the potato is large enough, pinch off the ends of the sprouts and little fingers and toes will appear in a short time. Mr. potato is not a handsome looking creature, yet his growth is amusing to a child.
